AMUSEMENTS.

Lewis Morrison in "Frederick the Great" at English's.

Up to last night, perhaps, there was an impression hereabouts that Lewis Morrison would not be acceptable in any character than that of Mephisto in his production of "Faust," with which the people of Indianapolis naturally became thoroughly familiar during the fifteen years he visited this city. However, not very many lines of George Foster Platt's ingenious comedy had been spoken until there was a revulsion of sentiment and long before the fall of the final curtain the audience had given in its unanimous verdict that Lewis Morrison will do very well, indeed, in "Frederick the Great," despite his intimation to the contrary in his somewhat pessimistic-albeit honeyed-curtain speech.

"Frederick the Great" is called a spectacular comedy, but those words convey faint impression of the entrancing features it contains. It is spectacular, yet not in the commonly accepted meaning of that term. There are no sensational scenic or mechanical effects; the settings are simply as elaborate and beautiful as any carried by a road company. Certainly nothing more handsomely mounted has been seen at English's during the entire season. It is comedy, but only in the first act. In the second the comedy element leaps clear of the author's control and assumes the form of a charming, hilarious farce. There is scarcely a moment in that act when the audience is not sent from one convulsion of laughter into a fresh paroxysm. To de scribe the causes of this merriment would be to spoll some very agreeable surprises for those who will certainly emerge from the shell of their prejudice and go to see this fascinating play. In evolving the character of Frederick | to the regular programme announced, Mrs. for comedy purposes the author has un- H. H. Thomas will give some vocal selecdoubtedly taken liberties with him, as well as with royalty in general, and yet so matchless is the art of Morrison that his audience did not know this until they had left the theater. Whatever the Frederick of history may have been, the Frederick of last night, played by Mr. Morrison, was eminently satisfactory to the public who saw and enjoyed him.

Besides investing his play with the mos luxurious surroundings and entering heartily into the commanding role arranged for nself, Mr. Morrison has added to the luster of his renown by selecting a company of real players to support him. Naturally, interest centered in the personality of La Barberina, the witching, intriguing Italian dancer, interpreted by Miss Florence Roberts, who in private life is Mr. Morrison's wife. The highest and most sincere praise that can be given to the work of Miss Roberts is the statement that it could not easily have been improved on. Lorena Atwood as the Princess Amelia added greatly to the charm of the piece by her beauty of face and form, coupled with a rich, magnetic voice. Adele Clarke showed herself a comedienne of much power in the character of Countess Swartzfeld. The men in the company are an unusually fine lot, and for the most part met all demands made upon them. Frank B. Flanning as Baron Von Trenck, R. F. Sullivan as Voltaire and Clarence J. Arper as General Hulsen were much in evidence and contributed their full shares to the success of the entertainment. Mr. Platt, the author, has been exceedingly modest in the character arranged for himself, but as Lieutenant Hulsen, although having not a great deal to say, won hearty, emphatic recognition. "Frederick the Great" is to be repeated at a special matinee this afternoon, and its brief engagement terminates with tonight's performance. There can be but little doubt that Mr. Morrison will be greeted with audiences more commensurate to the merits of his production, although that of last night was of fair size.

be star features. Billy B. Van, who heads the Bohemian Burlesquers, has always been a favorite in Indianapolis and the fact that he has a strong company behind him is likely to increase his popularity at the Empire Theater next week.

"Just Before Dawn," the melodrama written by Hugh Gibson and staged by Lincoln J. Carter, seems to be about what Park patrons want, since they crowd that theater afternoon and night to see it. The matinee this afternoon and to-night's presentation conclude the brief engagement.

To-day the Grand Stock Company will wind up a remarkably successful week with two performances of the popular play, "Hazel Kirke." The house for the matinee this afternoon is practically sold out, and there is a good sale for to-night's performance, but excellent seats are still to be had.

On the opening night of the stock company's week in "Frou Frou," Jan. 29, the giving of souvenir photographs, which was a pleasing feature of last season at the Grand, will be resumed. This year, however, the members of the company will be photographed in characters they have assumed or will assume. The first picture to be given away will be that of Miss Shannon in the costumes she will wear as Gilberte in "Frou Frou."

Manager Miller, of English's Opera House, announced positively last night Irving to present "Robespierre" at his single engagement in this city Feb. 1. There are several reasons for this disappointing change of plan, chief of which is that an unusually large number of supernumeraries are necessary in the production of the play and the training of these extra peoole requires at least three weeks' time beforehand. Another reason, Manager Miller rays, is that the sage of the opera iouse is not large enough to accommodate the scenery and settings used.

The lights will be going at English's Opera House every night next week. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the Kendals give three night presentations of their London and New York success, "The Elder Miss Blossom." Thursday night only William Morris and Miss Frances Drake will be seen in Anthony Hope's laughable com-edy, "The Adventure of Lady Ursula." The week's theatrical festival comes to a close with Jacob Litt's big production of "Sport-Life," presented by a cast of nearly two hundred people, including Hardee Kirkland, well known in Indianapolis through his long connection with the Grand Stock Company last year.

MAIL BOX SMASHED By a Runaway Horse-The Animal

A little red mail box, the property of Uncle Sam, was demolished about 11:30 last night by a buggy attached to a runaway horse, which broke away from a hitching post at Beville avenue and Washington street. The contact of the buggy with the mail box broke the harness and loosened the horse, which continued running until it reached the Big Four tracks, on Missouri street. The animal dashed against a Big Four passenger train which was passing at the time, and was thrown back insensible. The horse and buggy belonged to Horace F. Wood and had been let to Walter Ruske, 153 Leota street, who stopped at a saloon on Beville avenue. The contents of the mail box floated around for some moments in a pool of water at the corner until a policeman saw them, and, after gathering them up, took them into the Bates House to dry.

Schaefer Runs 234 Points, and May Add to the Number To-Day.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 .- Play was continued in the fourteen-inch balke line handicap match in which Jacob Schaefer is endeavoring to score 3,000 points against 1,500 for Ora C. Morningstar, of Chicago. Schaefer enlivened the afternoon session by making a sensational run of 177 on his second turn. He backed this up by gathering a big cluster of 79 buttons off the rail, and the result of the game netted him points. In the evening run, Schaefer's first big run was a cluster of 91 buttons. On his next turn at the table he pushed up 234 points. This run is almost a record breaker and the fact that it was unfinished may make it that when the men meet to-morrow. The score follows: Afternoon game-Morningstar, 100; average, 8 4-12; high run, 33. Schaefer, 327; average, 29 8-11; high runs, 177 and 79.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19.-The steamer Doric, from Asiatic ports, via Honoluli arrived to-day bringing news of a fresh outburst of the plague, six deaths having occurred between the departure of the steamer China, which arrived here Monday, and the departure of the Doric, which left Hononiulu Jan. 13. This brings the total number of deaths from the plague for the present outbreak up to 28, and it is understood there are twenty-six cases in the hands of the health officials. Honolulu's Chinatown is being burned and every effort is being made to stamp out the disease. The Doric did not dock at Honolulu, but the Hawaiian mail was taken out to her in tugs. The Doric was sent to the quarantine station, but it is thought

Among the passengers on the Doric were European squadrons. Lieutenant Commander Thomas, of the American Philippine squadron, returns on leave and gov-

Clover Leaf Sale Postponed.

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 19.-While striking the petition of George N. Thornton and Franklin Sawyer from the files, Judges Taft and Ricks to-day postponed the sale of the Toledo, St. Louis & Kansas City Railroad from Feb. 14 to April 2. The decree for sale was made in Cincinnati, Nov. 13, 1899, and mailed to the clerk in Toledo to be entered. This was sustained in an opinion handed down in the United States Court to-day. The court holds that the petitions of Thornton and Sawyer be stricken from the files for the reason that they were filed without the permission of the court and by persons who are not parties to the cause.

No More Bogus Wheeling Stogies.

BOSTON, Jan. 19 .- Chief Justice Fuller, in the United States District Court for the district of Massachusetts, has made permanent the preliminary injunction granted some time ago restricting cigar or tobacco manufacturers from selling or offering for sale any stogies bearing the word "Wheeling," except such as are actually manufactured in the city of Wheeling, W. Va. The decision also enjoins manufacturers from selling or delivering to any persons who ask for or desire to purchase Wheeling stogies any article other than the genuine Wheeling stogies, manufactured and made in the city of Wheeling.

The preacher's garments presented a striking contrast to the soft raiment of that luxurious day. He was no reed, bowing obsequiously under the breath of imperialism. The burden of his preaching was the imminence of the kingdom of God. Ine application was a call to repentance and thorough-going reformation; the sign was bap-

All Israel experienced a great awakening. The Sabbatical year gave leisure for hearing and meditating. Even those who did not honestly accept his preaching were pleased with the novel sensation of its electrifying rays. It was well worth one's while to see and hear him. The measure of his success is evident in the common belief that he himself was the Messiah-a mistake that he instantly rectified with the most complete self-effacement. Yet the inference was still drawn, "What must the King be like whose herald is decked in such moral grandeur?"

The person and mission of John Baptist seemed a last effort of Providence to awaken the Hebrew nation. Had he never uttered a word, his very self would have been a sermon. Russian Whist.

Springfield Republican. America has already rivaled England as a home for whist; it will be interesting to see whether we shall also follow the example of our transatlantic cousins in the mania for "bridge," or "Russian whist," which is now all the rage in London and in many card circles has made whist as obsolete as "Boston." It is a sort of dummy whist. Different suits of cards give different values to the tricks, the red suits, for example, being more valuable than the black. The dealer does not turn up a trump card, but has the privilege of making any suit he pleases trumps, or may declare no trumps, which increases the value of the tricks. This value, also, may be doubled again and again by the holders of good hands, so that it is a game of uncertainties. The best authorities use American leads, which are rather dropping out of use in English whist. A treatise on bridge by Archibald Dunn, jr., has lately been published in England, and there is likely to be demand for American books.

Gilded or Tinned.

Detroit Journal. Here the cannibal king asks more particularly as to the captive. "I am told he was in his own country one of the jeunesse doree, or gilded youth!" says the grand keeper of the royal "Well, I fancy anything will be better than the tinned youth we've been getting. observes his majesty. These savages, it seems, speak habitually of canned goods as tinned goods, thus betraying the influence upon them of the virile Anglican civilization.
